“ To all of the family, I offer my deepest condolences. From my earliest moments of my childhood, Mrs. Sanders has always been a very key figure in my life. For many years she was like another grandmother and made no distinction between her grandchildren and me. There are many things in life that I learned from the times we shared. Simple things like how much better water tastes out of a gourd dipper and those things that are much more complex. Things like being able to stand on your own and to know who you are. From the time I could walk and escape out of the house till I was in Jr. high school, most days had a part that was spent with her. I have strange view on begin able to make it. That is to say that I have an understanding of how to get by and be self sufficient. I make soap, can clean and cook chitterlings, I can piece a quilt and tack it together. I have an understanding of how to save seed from one year to the next. It was her that taught me how to put up preserves and to can. She instilled in me a love for plants and after all these years I still have the houseleek plant I was given as a child. Still to this day on New Years, I make sure that I am the first person to visit my parents and to bring a gift. Just as I had been at hers for many years. She taught me a lot and for those life lessons I will be forever grateful!
