“ Words cannot express the way I feel at this time. The feelings that matter are of all of you, her family who I know she loved and lived for. I remember as I let myself reflect over our childhood years of when I was invited to her house after church on Sunday to play and have dinner. I seldom got a glimpse of how a family should be, all sitting down to dinner to eat, with daddy at the head of the table. I know the table was spread with eternal blessings and her mom and dad pulled out her chair as she took her seat beside them around the banquet table on high. They said, "We've been waiting on you." We thank you for the life you have lived on earth and now your suffering is over. Praise God and I pray He will cradle each one of you in His embrace until that day when she will be pulling out your chair, "come and dine!"
