“ I love you and I still miss you. I think of you very often. We had some wild times, some good times, and some not so good times. But through it all there was love present. You were an excellent musician - still remember you belting out songs one day in the living room of Dubard with an acoustic guitar. Your wild stories of fossil hunting, cheering for Turk-A-LOOOO, the time I thought you lied to the hospital about your middle name (I don't know why, but Jerome just seemed like you made it up on the spot), the time we got pulled over on assembly street because you hung half your body out the window of my car...but it's not really specific moments that I miss the most. It was the joy you brought to basic interactions. The wit and humor that you couldn't turn off. The child like wonder you brought to mundane situations that made them exciting and new. My life is better and enriched for having known you. I love you Nick.
