“ Dearest sister-in-law, you made an exciting impression on me the first time I saw you and, of course, thereafter and always. I was clerking at my father’s country store and you and a couple of your high school friends drove from Ashwood to Stokes Bridge to see my brother Buddy (“Skeet” to everyone else). There you sat on the hood of that car, looking sassy with your collar turned up, a devil-may-care vibe and an impish grin - just like Rizzo in the movie Grease. Who wouldn’t have been smitten with such allure! Decades later you became my sister-in-law, bringing your excitement to our family. You embraced Wilson and me wholeheartedly with love. Your passion for reading enhanced your keen intellect, which you kept mostly to yourself. Practical with a large measure of common sense, you were an equal sparring partner with my brother, and you touched all who knew and loved you. Rest in peace, Wanda, my dear friend and sister. Tommy

Mrs. Wanda it has been a pleasure to meet a woman with humor and class. I still think of your days that we had several conversations. I know that you was a Belk shopper and classic woman. Rest in Paradise 🙏❤️❤️
